Friedrich the Great is one of Prussia's most famous rulers - but what was his childhood like? His hobbies and passions? And what about court life? That was certainly not always easy! As a royal lady's maid, Sophie knows all about the king and his family - and fascinating stories about life behind the scenes! With Sophie as your guide through the New Wing at Charlottenburg Palace 1 families can enjoy a different take on court life (children aged 6–10). spsg.de

Younger children (from 3 years on) can enjoy all the fun of a play, magic tricks or clowns, while parents relax over coffee and cake or something more substantial. The same principle applies to family meals - children can eat and afterwards explore the climbing castle, slide, drawing and toy corner, while parents indulge in the Charlottchen's 2 tasty regional cuisine! restaurant-charlottchen.de

Explore the city's sporting side – discover Berlin's Olympic Stadium on your own or on a fascinating live tour 3. View the underground warmup halls in the stadium's catacombs or climb to the intermediate roof for a bird's-eye view of this former UEFA five-star stadium! Discover Berlin's nautical side at Greenwich Promenade 39. Enjoy a stroll along the esplanade and the views over the water as the wind gently ripples the lake, the waves whoosh and the swans call. This is also an ideal starting point for a short or long tour on one of the many sightseeing boats leaving from the jetties. If you prefer a more sportive approach, why not hire a paddle boat and explore Tegeler See lake for yourself?

Lichtenberg is up-and-coming, with young families settling around the Rummelsburger Bucht bay and creatives living the dream in charming old industrial buildings.

Schrotkugelturm Tower Originally, the tower in the heart of the Kaskelkiez district used gravity to turn droplets of molten lead into perfectly formed buckshot, legendary for its accuracy. Today, the tower (15) offers a fascinating insight into history - and a wonderful view from 40 metres up! Visit the tower on a scheduled tour.

Berlin's lakes and waterways are delightful to explore. And at the Spreeboote Boat Rental (11) you can hire everything from stand-up paddle boards or paddle boats to motor boats complete with picnic baskets and BBQs – as licence-free boats or with skippers! spreeboote.de

The Theater an der Parkaue 12, Berlin's municipal youth stage, presents many of theatre's different facets - from international works to myths of past eras, familiar fairy tales, newly translated works, old favourites and classics from 2000 years of literature. Its productions and festivals have firmly established the theatre's reputation as one of the leading national and international stages for children and young people. Check out the programme – and be inspired! parkaue.de

No one likes queueing... but it's well worth it when your reward is artisan ice cream from the SchokoLadenEismanufaktur (13) in the Kaskelkiez neighbourhood! All their ice cream is handmade - simply heavenly! In winter, you might prefer their artisan chocolate and truffle pralines – another good reason to join the queue!

Out in the countryside, you can unwind, relax, and just enjoy the plants and animals. The Malchow Nature Conservation Station 14 is dedicated to environmental education and species and biotope protection. Here, you can celebrate the Stork Festival in autumn, or buy organic products at the farm shop all year round. naturschutzstation-malchow.de Spandau is rich in contrasts – a treasure trove of history and a modern industrial location, a water sports paradise and a leafy landscape with romantic corners!

St. Nicholas' Church After window shopping as you stroll Spandau Old Town, lead for the medieval gothic St. Nicholas' Church (45). There your children can try to find the cannonball stuck in the north brick facade – a cannonball said to have been fired by Napoleon's troops!

Spandau has the oldest signs of settlement and civilisation in all Berlin. Here, history is vibrantly alive! After enjoying the stunning views from the 30-metre-high Juliusturm tower (41), set off on your tour of discovery around the 16th-century Citadel - a square Renaissance fortress surrounded entirely by water. But the thick walls of the Citadel, rated as one of Europe's best-preserved Renaissance fortresses, not only conceal exciting finds from past eras - they also regularly provide accommodation for lodgers! Every winter, over 10,000 bats come to hibernate in the nooks and crannies of the old fortress walls. Children of all ages (and their parents!) find it fascinating to view the bats close up in the Citadel's darkened Bat Cellar 42. zitadelle-berlin.de

The ideal family day out? A fun place to visit with activities for the kids, tasty food and a chance for parents to relax - just what you find at the Vierfelderhof Farm 43 in Gatow. Here, kids can burn off some energy on the fun farm playgrounds, jump from piles of straw, visit the farm animals and watch farm life around them. And when hunger strikes, they can join their parents in the farm café for delicious home-made cake! vierfelderhof.de

An ideal place to play! Südpark Spandau 44 has been recently revamped and now includes new water features on 1500 sq. metres of landscaped lawns. The two paddling pools of different depths are perfect for young children and toddlers to splash around on hot summer days - and in almost any weather, the large ship playground is great for climbing and games of hide and seek.

Marzahn-Hellersdorf

Opposites attract - with fields, meadows and an idyllic village with a windmill set against tower blocks from the former GDR.

In 1884, a traditional family of Viennese magicians opened a magic shop on Berlin's Friedrichstraße. Today, the shop, appropriately called Zauberkönig Berlin 26 (literally, "King of Magic") is in Neukölln and – hey presto! – famed for its magic tricks, novelty items, costumes, masks, toys and more. Well worth a visit! zauberkoenig-berlin.de Gliding along on skates is hard to beat and especially exhilarating in an open-air ice rink. In the Ice Stadium in Sportpark Neukölln 27, you can show off your elegant style on the straight runs, or impress on the space dedicated to turns and pirouettes (hire skates: Euro sizes 24 to 50).

At the Puppet Theatre Museum 28, children aged 2 and over can meet a king who wants to cook spaghetti, see Pinocchio imagining he has strings, and enjoy many other wonderful pieces of puppetry. Children can also try out their own puppetry skills. Over-8s will love the torchlight tours – complete with some fun scary moments! Armed with torches, they tour the exhibition and explore the exciting atmosphere of the world of puppets at night. puppentheater-museum.de

The FEZ Berlin [59] in the spreading Wuhlheide Park covers a vast 113,000 sq. metres. The leisure centre has everything kids love, with a bathing lake and lawns for summer, as well as playgrounds, basketball court and kickabout areas, the Eco Island, and a climbing tower. If skies are grey, families can visit the Alice Museum for Children, take in a show at the Astrid Lindgren Stage, or visit the indoor playgrounds.
